“A Dog Has Died” - Neruda

My dog has died.

I buried him in the garden next to a rusted old machine.Some day I'll join him right there, but now he's gone with his shaggy coat, his bad manners and his cold nose, and I, the materialist, who never believed in any promised heaven in the sky for any human being,
I believe in a heaven I'll never enter.
Yes, I believe in a heaven for all dogdom where my dog waits for my arrival waving his fan-like tail in friendship.Turn over

Ai, I'll not speak of sadness here on earth, of having lost a companion who was never servile.

His friendship for me, like that of a porcupine withholding its authority, was the friendship of a star, aloof, with no more intimacy than was called for,
with no exaggerations :

he never climbed all over my clothes filling me full of his hair or his mange, he never rubbed up against my knee like other dogs obsessed with sex.

No, my dog used to gaze at me, paying me the attention I need,
the attention required to make a vain person like me understand that, being a dog, he was wasting time, but, with those eyes so much purer than mine, he'd keep on gazing at me with a look that reserved for me alone all his sweet and shaggy life, always near me, never troubling me, and asking nothing.

Ai, how many times have I envied his tail as we walked together on the shores of the sea in the lonely winter of Isla Negra where the wintering birds filled the sky and my hairy dog was jumping about full of the voltage of the sea's movement : my wandering dog, sniffing away with his golden tail held high, face to face with the ocean's spray.

Joyful, joyful, joyful, as only dogs know how to be happy with only the autonomy of their shameless spirit.

There are no good-byes for my dog who has died, and we don't now and never did lie to each other.

So now he's gone and I buried him, and that's all there is to it.

- 1 How does the speaker describe the location where they buried their dog ?
- 2 How does the speaker feel about the concept of heaven for humans versus heaven for dogs ?
- 3 How does the speaker describe the dog's independence and personality ?
- 4 How does the speaker's dog help him to understand himself as a "vain person" ?
- 5 Why does the speaker envy his dog's tail ?
- 6 What does the speaker mean by "a heaven I'll never enter" ?
- 7 What is the significance of the line, "with only the autonomy of their shameless spirit" ?

Turn over

- 8 Why does the speaker choose not to “speak of sadness here on earth” after the dog’s passing ?
- 9 How does the speaker view their relationship with the dog, considering the line “we don’t now and never did lie to each other” ?
- 10 How does the poem explore the theme of loss and companionship through the speaker’s reflections on his dog ?
